

DARING WOMAN SHATTERS RECORD OF FLYER-HUSBAND TO CAPE TOWN

FLIGHT IS LAUDED

Uncharted Wilds Are Crossed by Aviatix

CAPE TOWN, South Africa, Nov. 18.—Completing the fastest journey ever made from London to Capetown, Amy Johnson, Britain's premier aviatix, set her trim plane down on the Capetown airport this afternoon.

She slashed more than ten hours from the record held by her husband, Captain James A. Molison, the first man to make a solo flight westward across the Atlantic.

Thousands of persons gathered at the airport accorded the daring aviatix a triumphal welcome. But she had no desire for a hero's welcome.

NEARLY EXHAUSTED

"All I want is a bath and some sleep," she said. "I've hardly closed my eyes since I left London."

Making a perfect landing in the teeth of a head wind, Amy Johnson taxied to the far side of the airport, where a squadron of police lifted her from the plane to protect her from the milling crowds. Hundreds of persons had been awaiting her for hours, and her arrival was greeted with a symphony of shrieking sirens and automobile horns.

At 1:30 p. m. just 4 days, 6 hours and 53 minutes after leaving Lymington aerodrome, near London, she smashed her husband's record by ten hours and 20 minutes.

Flitted as one of the greatest achievements in long distance flying, Mrs. Molison's daring venture took her over trackless deserts and uncharted wilds. For hours at a time, she was out of touch with the world, soaring over uninhabited territories where unknown hazards lay beneath her, but she never faltered either in determination or in her magnificent control of her plane.

COURSE UNCHARTED

Mrs. Molison, greeted here as "Amy," just as she has been in all lands to Britain's outposts of empire, got away from Lymington aerodrome near London at dawn on November 14, determined to shatter the record her husband set up when he made history's first solo flight across the Sahara.

From London she flew to Oran, Algeria, and from there across the desert to Gao, French West Africa. The next stop was Duala in the Cameroons. On the third leg to Benzuola, Portuguese West Africa, the aviatix reported an oil pressure trouble which threatened to end the flight.

She effected repairs, however, and continued along the African west coast, with but one more stop, at Mossamedes, before sweeping down to Capetown.

CLAIM VON PAPEN WAS THREATENED

BERLIN, Nov. 18.—A suspected attempt upon the life of Chancellor Franz Von Papen was revealed today when a woman was sentenced to three months in jail by a special court for possession of dangerous weapons.

The woman was Paula Buddé, wife of a postal inspector. According to police, she aroused suspicion when she appeared at the chancellery and was retained. Authorities found a 12-inch knife concealed on her person.

She was quoted as saying: "I wanted to teach Von Papen a lesson."

Cox Lauds Work Of Ohio Prohibition Department

Milton S. Cox, deputy prohibition commissioner of Ohio and former Pickaway county school superintendent, declared before the Rotary club Thursday that even though public opinion seems to be opposed to prohibition the state department has done a good job in eliminating many of the nuisances in Ohio.

"It has never been the desire of the department in recent years to enter homes without proper legal procedure for the department recognize the home as a sacred place," Mr. Cox said.

"Every law has been violated by some one," he continued, "for the laws of Moses, the Ten Commandments, have been broken and the 18th amendment is no different from any other law. It is our job to see that the law is enforced and in abating the nuisances that grow

As Man Side-Track a River

If this picture were wired for sound, you'd hear a pandemonium of noise as if the sky were falling on you. The photo was made at the exact instant that several charges of explosive blew tons of rock into the Colorado River, thereby diverting the course of the stream into a tunnel prepared for it through a mile of mountain. This was the first important engineering step in the construction of Hoover Dam, the largest project of its kind ever attempted.

Impressive Rites Staged At Elks

Despite the fact that several of their regular officers were unable to appear, officers and drill team of the Columbus B. F. O. Elks lodge No. 37 gave local Elks a real treat Thursday evening when a class of five candidates, C. G. Chaffin, Lemuel B. Weldon, Emanuel Rothman, Leo H. White and O. L. Scott, was initiated into Elksdom.

The precision of the officers, of course, was handicapped by the fact that several regular officers were not on hand but this did not interfere with the impressiveness of the work. Charles F. Fast, past

The step does not involve the question of international control of armaments.

COLUMBUS, Nov. 18.—In a desperate effort to save himself from the electric chair, John "Red" Downing, 42, pardoned convict, was to take the stand in his own defense today as his trial for the brutal murder of Mrs. Daniel Bonzo, 44, rushed toward its close.

Face to face across the courtroom, Downing was to see Bonzo's friend and benefactor, for the first time since the slaying on Oct. 25 when Mrs. Bonzo was killed with a ginger ale bottle and part of a teeming wheel.

Prosecutor Donald J. Hoskins indicated he would subject Downing to a vigorous questioning charging him with criminal ingratitude. Both Bonzo and Mrs. Bonzo helped Downing to "get a start" after he was pardoned from the prison for killing a Cincinnati woman.

Many Solons Change Idea On Dry Law

WASHINGTON, Nov. 18.—The crash of holdover senators, flopping from the dry cause to the liberal side of the prohibition issue, sounded like a cannonading on capitol hill today.

The latest to endorse prohibition reform was Senator Arthur Vandenberg (R) of Michigan, formerly regarded as one of the outstanding constitutional drys in the senate. He declared the action of Michigan voters in repealing their state dry law was a mandate to him to vote for liberalization of the Volstead act and submission of a resolution to the states, proposing repeal of the Eighteenth amendment.

By his switch, Vandenberg joined an army of former dry senators, who abandoned the prohibition cause as a result of the tremendous wet majorities in the recent election. This group made the change without submitting their own views to their constituents. It included such prominent leaders in both parties as Reed (R) of Pennsylvania, Robinson (D) of Arkansas, Harrison (D) of Mississippi, Couzens (R) of Michigan, Ashurst (D) of Arizona, and Ladd (R) of Ohio.

The group, before very long, will include also such party spokesmen as McNary (R) of Oregon, McKellar (D) of Tennessee, Byrnes (D) of South Carolina, Glass (D) of Virginia, Patterson (R) of Missouri, and Swanson (D) of Virginia. All of these senators—from Reed to Swanson—either voted against legalizing beer or against consideration of a repeal resolution in the last session of Congress. They will be on the other side of the prohibition fence at the December session.

VOTES WELCOMED

The liberals do not need their votes to modify the Volstead act—but all would be welcome in the fight to repeal or change the 18th amendment. This would result from the constitutional provision, requiring a two-thirds vote for submission of constitutional changes—whereas but a majority vote is necessary to change the Volstead act.

In announcing his switch, Vandenberg declared the voters had "spoken convincingly" in their "undeniable mandate" for a change in prohibition laws.

"I favor immediate resubmission of the 18th amendment," he added. "A just regard for the rights of majorities and the validity of law enforcement demands it."

"The repeal proposal should preserve federal cooperation in protecting self-elected dry territory from wet invasion. Without this safeguard, I venture the prophecy that the Democratic south

Car Crashes Head-on With Southbound Truck at Hartman Farm, Thursday.

Guy Rush, 55, well known sportsman, was painfully injured shortly after 6 p. m. Thursday when his Pontiac coach and a Ford truck collided just north of the Hartman farm on the Columbus pike. The name of the driver of the Ford was not learned.

Rush, who had been hunting all day Thursday, was going to Columbus when the accident happened.

He is suffering from a badly bruised chest, a lacerated forehead and a cut left hand. The steering wheel on Rush's car was broken when his chest crashed against it.

The injured man was taken to the Elmcreek country club, south of Columbus, where Mrs. Rush is employed as a cook. Rush's automobile is a total wreck.

A valuable dog, a five-months-old setter answering to the name of "Laddie," could not be found after the accident.

EXTRADITION OF BARNES REFUSED

Extradition of Ralph Barnes of Fort Wayne, Ind., by officials of that city was refused Thursday when Sheriff Charles Radcliff and Deputy Sheriff Bob Armstrong went to the Indiana city to return Barnes for failure to provide.

A judge hearing the case dismissed the charge when evidence to show that Mrs. Barnes had lived with her husband in Fort Wayne but had left him to return home was presented. It was disclosed in court at Fort Wayne that Barnes, upon losing work here, went to Fort Wayne taking his wife with him.

Mrs. Barnes did not inform officers here that she had lived with her husband in Fort Wayne, officials say.

EYE IS INJURED

J. G. Tomlinson, of Ashville, suffered an injured eye at noon Thursday when he was preparing to go hunting. How the injury was caused is not known although the man was not shot.

He was taken to the office of Dr. C. G. Stewart where his injury was treated.

YOUTH IMPROVED

John Reynolds, 18, of Laurelville, who lost his left leg just above the knee when wounded by his own gun, Tuesday, is reported in fair condition at Cherrington hospital, Logan. Attaches at the hospital Friday declared, "He is doing as well as can be expected."

No blood poisoning or any other infection has set in according to the hospital.

Reynolds was hunting with his uncle, William Reynolds of this city, when the accident occurred.

CHICAGO, Nov. 18.—Young hoodlums of the city's southwest district were being rounded up today in an intensive hunt for the youthful desperado who spread a reign of terror in the neighborhood by holding up two couples in parked automobiles, murdering one man and attacking a girl.

The search centered on efforts to find Ignatius Varecha, 17-year-old paranoiac who recently escaped from the Dixon state hospital where he had been committed for wounding a man during the hold-up of a parked car. The youth's mother, Mrs. James Varecha, aided police in the hunt. She rode about in a patrol car, pointing out places her son had frequented.

ABDUCTED GIRL

Varecha was made the object of the search when Miss Lillian Henry gave authorities a description of the youth terrorist who abducted her from the side of a male companion and held her captive for six hours, attacking her twice. Miss Henry, a niece of former Police Commissioner John Alcock, was kidnapped just a few blocks from the spot where the young bandit had shot and killed Frank

Former Ohio Teacher Aide To Roosevelt

ALBANY, N. Y., 18.—When Governor Franklin D. Roosevelt, president-elect, goes to the White House next Tuesday to confer with President Hoover on international debts, he will be accompanied by a professor and not a politician.

"Just breaking another precedent," Governor Roosevelt said in announcing he had invited Professor Raymond Moley of Columbia university, to act as his advisor in the epochal conference on which the eyes of the world will be focused.

Professor Moley is head of the public law department at the Columbia, and is 46 years old. He once was a school teacher in Ohio, and he acted as advisor to former Governor Al Smith on several occasions in the 1928 presidential campaign.

He was Governor Roosevelt's "right hand man" during the recent campaign, accompanying him on his nationwide tour and aiding him in the preparation of all his speeches.

Prince Of Wales Mobbed By Irish Working Girls

BELFAST, Nov. 18.—The Prince of Wales had another taste of ferocious mobbing today when he was mobbed by hundreds of excited Irish women at the Lanyon Hotel.

The Prince arrived at the factory for a day of inspection at 10 a. m. He was a sight that sent a shiver of excitement through the hearts of the girls who were waiting for him.

No sooner had the world's most eligible bachelor entered the factory than the girls rushed from their places crowding around him until he was scarcely able to move.

All parts of the factory were decorated with flags and bunting and the girls had decorated their own hats for a week to make him a "Princess."

REMAIN AHEAD OF DEFENSE, GREEN BAY MENTOR DECLARES

NEW YORK, Nov. 18.—"Keep one jump ahead of the defense," that's the system we use and that's the secret, if any, of our success."

Ole Lambeau, who coaches the Green Bay Packers, the one perfect player of all time, laughed when asked what power this was he seemed to wield. His Green Bay Packers haven't lost a game this year and football critics have frankly proclaimed them to be the greatest team that ever drew breath - or pay checks.

"We work hard," Lambeau said today after coming in from morning practice. "We're in a fast league with a lot of good teams. We have no breakers on our schedule. Last week we had a tough game with Boston. Couldn't do a thing with their line so we had to go to work on passes to beat them. This week it's the Giants and they're no push over."

CITES GRANGE

"Let me tell you the difference between pro ball and college ball. Red Grange was a riot at college. He was a wonder. Then he came into our league and in his first year he was a flop. We found that we could pass him dizzy. We could run by him. He was only a ball carrier."

"But then," Lambeau shook his head sadly, "Grange started to learn football. He knew he couldn't get by just on his ball carrying ability. Today? Today Grange is the best defensive player and the best blocker in the league. He doesn't make as many eighty yard runs, maybe, as he did when he was at Illinois, but he's a far greater ball player - can do anything. Grange is smart."

UNDER ROCK

Lambeau refuses to make a mystery of his system—the system which has brought such fame to Green Bay. "We use the Notre Dame attack because I went to Notre Dame and learned by football under Rock. I was there the first year he coached. Hank Anderson was on the team with me and later George Gipp. Rock never let the parade pass him by. Each year just as opposing teams thought they had solved his attack, he bobbed up with something new. We try to do that with Green Bay. You can't stand still in football. You either go ahead or you go back."

New York City has become so sold on Green Bay that when ever the team visits the Polo grounds the S. R. O. sign flutters in the breeze. Professional football, once the step child of the gridiron world has become its favorite son and as long as teams like Green Bay continue to play football which is about eighty percent more efficient than any college team can show, the professional game will continue to lure the customers.

SPARTANS TO MEET BOSTON'S GRIDDERS

PORTSMOUTH, Nov. 18.—Runners-up in National Professional League Standings, the Portsmouth Spartans meet the Boston Braves here Sunday in what may be the turning point in the 1932 race for the world's championship. It will be the first time the two teams have met but their rivalry lacks nothing in intensity because of its youth. The pennant hopes of the Spartans hinge on beating the Braves.

This is the first year in the league for the Boston team and a win here would be as sweet to the Back Bay boys as it would be to Tri-State fans. Composed chiefly of gridiron stars of such recent collegiate fame as Battles of West Virginia, Wesleyan, Jim Musick of Southern California and Tony Siano, who starred with Fordham when center and captain of that team, the Braves also carry enough veteran pro warriors for ample seasoning.

Against Boston's well balanced and brilliant array of stars the Spartans will hurl their "17 iron men" who are writing gridiron history as they turn back time and again the larger squads of the bigger city teams. Dutch Clark, Spartan Captain and Quarter, is conceded by sport writers to be the greatest player in the game today. He and his mates are turned up for Sunday's grid feat.

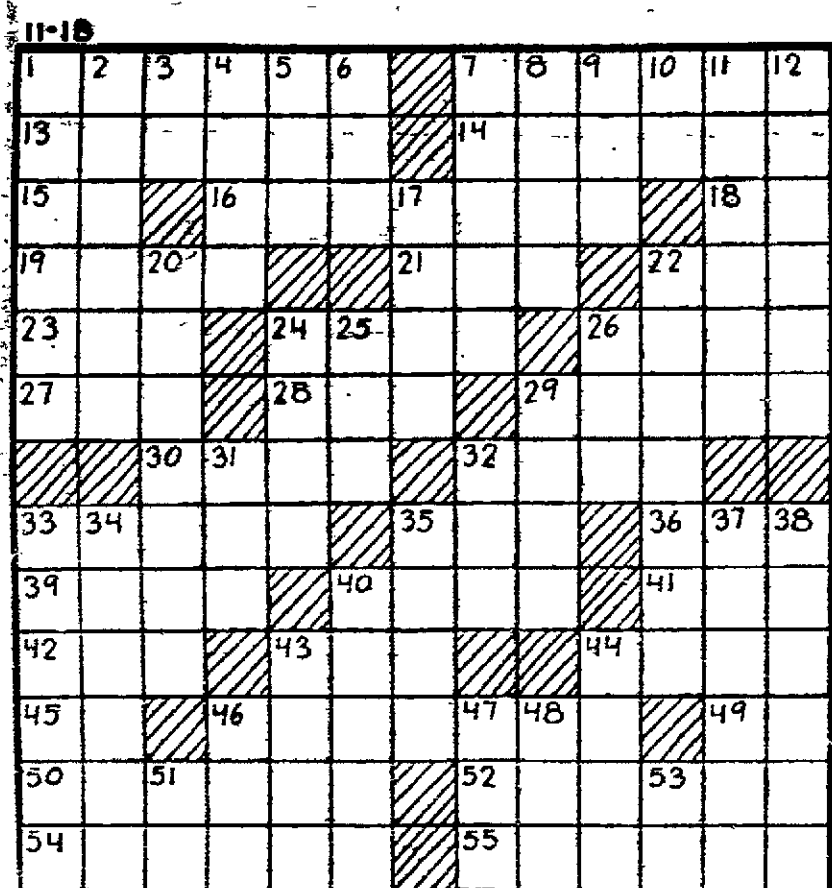

On their just completed tour of the circuit, the Spartans hung up an enviable record in a gruelling schedule suffering but one defeat in all their starts while covering some 4,000 miles between encounters. This is by far the most successful road trip the Portsmouth eleven has ever taken.

Yale and Harvard to Meet for Fifty-First Time

Above are some of the stars of the Yale and Harvard grid squads who will clash Saturday at Yale Bowl, New Haven, in the fifty-first meeting of the teams of the famous universities. The Eli-Crimson football war started way back in 1875 and since that time Yale's gridders have carried off the honors twenty-seven times and tied in six games. Both teams have had a poor season and Yale, with its victory over Dartmouth and tie with Princeton, is a slight favorite over John Harvard's warriors, but one guess is as good as another.

GRIDIRON IN PERFECT SHAPE FOR BISHOP-BOBCAT TUSSLE

DELAWARE, Nov. 18.—Weather conditions may not be ideal for the spectators Saturday when Ohio Wesleyan and Ohio university meet here in a Buckeye conference football game, but the players at least are insured solid turf on which to stage their annual battle.

Selby field, where the game is to be played, never has felt a tarpaulin blanket for the simple reason that none is needed. Within an hour after a heavy rain, the field is completely drained, and in excellent shape for play.

NO BARE SPOTS

Then, too, the field this week will be in the best shape since the season began, for the grass has been given a complete rest for three weeks. There are no bare spots where mud and ice may form.

Changes designed to bolster the team's attack and defense have been made this week by Coach George Gauthier of the Batting Bishops in an effort to turn back Ohio university's invasion.

Jim Hoff, Columbus, erstwhile center, will be seen at fullback for at least part of the game. A good center, Hoff has been forced to watch most of the game, this year from the sidelines due to the stellar work of George Myley, a senior who is putting forth the best efforts of his college career. Because of Hoff's general all-round experience, Gauthier plans to give him a whirl at fullback for part of the Ohio contest.

USE BELT AT END

Art Belt, Baltimore, who was shifted from halfback to end last week, apparently will be kept at the wing position this week because of his creditable showing against Western Reserve last week-end.

The demand for tickets hasn't lessened, despite Ohio Wesleyan's two successive reverses. Fans throughout the state apparently sense a battle.

His brother was being closely questioned in the hope that some statement he makes may supply the necessary information.

CITY IS ROUSED

The city was aroused by the crimes of the young terrorist and every available policeman and squad car was utilized in the hunt which was under the personal direction of Police Commissioner James F. Allman.

Throughout the night police women sat with detectives in parked automobiles, hoping to detect the youth into an attempt to repeat his crimes.

Residents of the southwest section were cautioned not to remain in parked automobiles after dark and to exercise care in their movements on the streets until the hand-dut-killer is captured.

Friends Aid Farmer

RONNER SPRINGS, Kan.—When Harold Piper, farmer living near here recently faced the loss of his home and dairy business through a forced sale, more than 200 neighbors intervened to help him. They pooled their resources and successfully financially aided him to get a new start.

Jolly Holdup

CHICAGO.—It cost Miss Anna Pickett just $10 when a man whose face and hands were blackened walked into the candy shop where she clerked. She laughed when the man drew out a revolver believing him to be a friend playing a prank, but the visitor took all the money in the cash register and fled.

would be the first to lead in rejecting this new constitutional order. In the best form possible, I shall vote at the December session to send the repeal question to the states as provided in article five of the constitution itself. I favor state action to continue to outlaw the saloon.

"Revision of the Volstead act in behalf of beer is limited by the Eighteenth amendment until repealed, within this limit some liberalization undoubtedly is possible. The Michigan referendum must be interpreted as supporting liberalization. I shall vote for such liberalization as stays within the constitution.

"I shall not vote to weaken the enforcement of the law as it exists at any given time. Whatever the law, enforcement is vital. It will be vital to any new order. The problem of liquor control is not ended by repeal. It simply enters a new phase with a new challenge."

Had congress thought of taxing the campaign "gas" also the budget would have been balanced with money to spare.

You've probably read enough chatter about the Ohio University-Ole Wesleyan game at Delaware, Saturday, that you are plenty tired of it. All that is needed is a prediction and that is Ohio University by one touchdown and possibly two.

Outstanding in the Big Ten Saturday is the contest between Michigan and Minnesota. The Gophers are the only team in the way of the Wolverines for the Big Ten title and unless Harry Newman's aerials can be stopped you might as well concede the gonfalon to Michigan, although believe it or not we'd like to see Purdue get a crack at the Ann Arborites. We've seen doubtful all year about the greatness of the GREAT football team of Michigan. With Newman stopped the Kipke-men are very ordinary. For example recall the Princeton game. One Michigan coach made the most common sense statement this week that we've seen concerning his football team the substance of it was that Michigan had strong men in the key position. These key positions must be quarterback when Newman and Petoskey the best pair in the conference hold forth.

Portsmouth's Spartans return to their home field Sunday meeting the Boston Braves led by Ernie Pickett, twice All-American at Southern California.

With these night football games one is never certain whether he is listening to a political or gridiron cheering section.

SPORTSMEN ARE WARNED

Reinhart Ired By Report of Hunters Resisting Game
Protector Here.

Following an attempt, Tuesday, of three Columbus men to resist Game Protector Clarence Francis in the performance of his duty, State Conservation Commissioner W. H. Reinhart has issued a statement from his office in Columbus warning hunters against interference with game protectors saying "it will be a costly performance."

Reinhart reminded sportsmen that such conduct will not be tolerated and that the penalty for resisting, assaulting, threatening or refusing to accompany a game protector when placed under arrest is a fine of from $100 to $500.

The commissioner's comment was prompted by a report submitted by Clay E. Harmon, chief of the bureau of law enforcement of the conservation division.

As a result of their attempt to prevent search by Mr. Francis, Noble and L. C. Davis, brothers, and Onofrio Mangia, all of Columbus, are in the county jail after being fined $100 and costs and their guns confiscated.

WINTER APPLES PLENTIFUL IN MARKET NOW

These are apple-picking days in the apple country. By the end of November the crop will be off the trees and in storage or on the market. Since early October, in fact, freight cars and trucks have been moving across the continent in all directions, distributing millions of bushels of apples from the regions that grow them to the rest of the country and other parts of the world. But the commercial crop, at that, is less than half the total quantity of apples grown in the United States. This is our staple fruit, grown on the home farm and on many a city lot, and counted almost as much of a standby as the Irish potato. The popularity of apples is possibly their greatest virtue from the nutrition standpoint, according to the Bureau of Home Economics of the U. S. Department of Agriculture. It is because we eat so many, especially so many raw apples, that their food values are important. They furnish a mild roughage, they contain vitamins A, B, and C, especially in the portion just under the skin, and they have some carbohydrate and some mineral value—not enough, however, to be so very important if we ate apples no oftener than we eat lemons, for example. But apples, although they are as old as the Garden of Eden on the other side of the world, in modern times have become pre-eminently a North American product. Of 211,506,000 bushels grown in the United States in 1931—which is many times larger than the crop in any country—more than 104 million bushels were sold for consumption as fresh fruit. The rest of the United States crop, more than 117 million bushels, supplied the home table with apples raw, cooked, or canned, or made into cider and vinegar.

and Missouri. Tastes differ, but nearly all of the varieties mentioned are good "eating apples." The Rome Beauty, however, is valued chiefly as a baking apple. The Baldwin is considered a general purpose apple. The Jonathan and Northern Spy, among others, are also considered excellent for sauce and pie, as well as for eating. In early times in this country, apples were chiefly used for making cider and vinegar. But the uses of apples nowadays are almost innumerable, running from such old reliable dishes as apple sauce, baked apples, apple pie, and apple dumplings, to combinations of all sorts. Fried apples and bacon, baked spareribs with apples stirring, fried apples and carrots, fried apples and onions, scalloped apples and cabbage, scalloped apples and sweet potatoes, are attractive dishes for the main course. Apple sauce cake, upside-down apple cake, Dutch apple cake, apple float, apple tapioca, apple brown Betty, apple cobbler, apple turnovers, are variations for dessert. Raw apples make a useful part of many kinds of salad. And the pectin content of apples makes them excellent for jelly, jam, and marmalade.

War Lord Premier?

Following the cabinet crisis in Tokyo, arising, it is believed, from dissension over the enormous budget appropriations for military purposes, General Kazumari Ugaki, Japan's military leader (above), is mentioned as the next Premier of Japan. Premier Saito, it is said, will be compelled to resign. General Ugaki is one of Japan's most ambitious war lords.

sary for this. If a casserole is not available, a roaster with a cover may be used. Grease the baking dish. Cut the onions in half, and place them in the bottom of the dish. Sprinkle with salt. Core the apples. Cut each into 4 or 5 rings, and stick the end of a pork chop through these rings. Then place the pork chops and apples over the layer of onions and sprinkle lightly with flour. Fill up the spaces with the potatoes, thinly sliced. Add the remaining salt and the pepper. Pour in the boiling water and cover the baking dish. Bake until tender, which will take a little over 1 hour. Then remove the cover of the baking dish and continue the baking until the top is a rich golden brown.

APPLE SALAD
Select medium-sized, firm, tart apples, pare, and core. Cook in a covered pan in sirup made in proportion of 2 cups water and 1 cup sugar. Use enough sirup to cover the apples. After cooking, drain the apples, chill, and fill the center with cottage or cream cheese which has been mixed with salt, paprika, and a little freshly chopped green pepper. Or form the cheese into balls, roll in ground nuts, and place beside the apples. Serve on lettuce with mayonnaise or French dressing.

APPLE COMPOTE
6 tart apples;
2 cups sugar;
2 cups water;
1-8 teaspoon salt.
Select tart apples that will hold their shape when cooked pare, and core them. In a pan large enough to hold all the apples make a sirup of the sugar and water, put in the apples and the salt, cover and simmer until the apples are tender when pierced with a straw. Drain, and place at once on plates for serving. If desired, the centers may be filled with tart jelly. A spoonful of hard sauce, grated coconut, or chopped nuts may be served on top.
The sirup may be used in fruit drinks, or more added to it and another lot of apples cooked in it.

DON'T TRIFLE WITH COMMON CONSTIPATION

Kellogg's ALL-BRAN Brings Relief

Constipation gets its grip on a person almost unawares. It often starts with such little things. Headaches. Listlessness. Bad complexion. Unpleasant breath. If unchecked, it may seriously impair your health.

Fortunately, you can avoid this danger by eating a delicious cereal. Laboratory tests show that Kellogg's ALL-BRAN provides two things needed to overcome common constipation: "bulk" and vitamin B. ALL-BRAN is also a rich source of iron for the blood.

Biological tests demonstrate that the "bulk" in bran is similar to that in leafy vegetables. Inside the body, it forms a soft mass, which gently clears out the intestinal wastes.

How much better than taking unpleasant patent medicines. Two tablespoonfuls of ALL-BRAN daily are usually sufficient. Serious cases, with every meal. If not relieved this way, see your doctor.

high school have organized Glee clubs.
Basketball practice has started and every one is anxious for the sound of the whistle which will call time for our first game. We have several new faces in both boys' and girls' lineup. Though some lack experience, they are displaying some ability which will be valuable to Perry Hl in the near future.
We are very proud of the interest that the supporters of the teams take in them but in order that we make the most of our time for basketball practice, we are going to request that you do not come to the school house on practice nights. We know you will co-operate with us in this request.

We open our season by invading the Adelphi, Ross-co court with both boys' and girls' teams on Friday, Nov. 18, and our first game on the home floor will be Wednesday, Nov. 23, with Perry playing host to Williamsport high school. We are sure you will enjoy the games and we know the teams always play harder when many loyal boosters are on the side-line. So let's come and boost for Perry Hl.

On account of the program Tuesday evening and the basketball game on Wednesday evening, the P. T. A. has been postponed until Wednesday evening, Nov. 30.

Joys of Living

WHO has not wished that he had lived in some remote and happy time? The magnificence of Rome, the glory of Greece, the golden chariots, the alabaster vases and the ivory chairs of Tutanekamen, fascinate and enthrall. Looking about upon a sick and weary world, nerve-shattered and hungry, it is not difficult to imagine how pleasant life must have been in an easier, golden day.

Next, if we had been living in the days of the pampered Pharaohs, the vast majority of us would have been digging the irrigation ditches, sweating over the great stones that went into the pyramids, or—if we had been particularly clever—perhaps hammering the gold that went into the ubiquitous statues of the king. The comforts of life were only at the top in 1500 B. C. and even the hope for the dissatisfied man of today in this thought—that his lot would have been infinitely worse 3,000 or more years ago.

It's easier to live today than ever before. Nearly all the woes from which the world suffers might have been prevented. But when an ancient civilization was overrun by a savage horde, or when plague or famine decimated the population of the fairest cities, the wisest of those people couldn't help themselves.

Migratory tribes have since been pretty well billeted and ticketed, railroads and steamships have conquered famine, and intelligent sanitation and magnificent brave and curious medicine is less respectful of disease with each passing year.

Harken, Ye Shoppers!

SHOPPING is one of the oldest of human activities—as old as the Garden of Eden, where the serpent proved himself an expert salesman and the first woman as keen a bargain hunter as the last. Man is not a shopper by nature, but many handicaps, the most serious, being the obsession that he is a poor fish and out of water to boot.

"Ordeal by Fire" is one thing; ordeal by shopping is another, but scarcely a different thing. Too bad there are no ideals for shoppers who have braved a bargain day without nursing a pet peeve or wearing a worried look. Also that there are no decorations for folks who can hold their own in a rush at the holiday season without holding back several hopeless but infuriated fellow-shoppers at the same time. Tell us how you shop and we will tell you what you are.

There is a fine art of shopping as everybody ought to know, and three simple rules are fundamental. First, know what you want and list your items before you leave home. Second, know where to go for what you want, which means a careful reading of the advertisements in the daily papers. Third, go after what you want as early in the shopping season as possible and thereby lighten the burden of pushing, pulling, elbowing, nerve-racking crowds. If there be a fourth rule it is this—let courtesy constrain your actions and speech; while you bargain, since civility helps to make shopping as well as love "one long sweet song."

Nurse Routs Bandit

NEW YORK—A nurse never forgets. A holdup man hit Miss Elizabeth Corry on the head three months ago. The score is even now. For in a second robbery attempt, she whacked the head of a bandit with a hammer before he could say "Hands up."

HEART STRINGS

By EDWINA L. MACDONALD

COPYRIGHT, 1932, BY KING FEATURES SYNDICATE, INC.

SYNOPSIS

Young and pretty Patricia Braithwaite becomes engaged to wealthy, middle-aged Harry Blaine to relieve her father's financial situation. She hopes in vain that handsome Jack Lawrence, whom she met once—and the only man she ever wanted to kiss her—will rescue her from Blaine. In despair, she turns to Jimmie Warren, her Aunt Pamela's husband. They become infatuated. Aunt Pamela blames herself for leading Pat to believe she no longer loved her husband. The fear of losing him makes Pamela realize how much she really cares. Finally, Jack arrives. Pat learns he is the son of wealthy Senator Lawrence, who was kidnapped a few years ago when he went to Mexico to investigate his father's property. Pat tells him he is too late as she loves Jimmie but Jack refuses to acknowledge defeat and a bitter rivalry develops between the two men. For days Jimmie avoids Pat. Unable to stand the strain, she determines to have an understanding with him and asks him to dance with her. Overcome with emotion, Pat faints in Jimmie's arms. He is conscious of everyone's stares. When Pat comes to, Jimmie reproaches her for making fools of herself and him.

CHAPTER TWENTY-SIX

"Please, Jimmie, I've got to talk with you."

"No," he said sharply.

She lifted her head, blue eyes flashing. "I will, or you'll carry me out."

"All right," he said grimly, and began moving toward the door. So absorbed had he been in his passion that he had not before realized that he and Pat were objects of gossip and wonder. Those secretively smiling eyes had revealed the truth to him. With a sense of shock it came to him that without doubt the whole colony was whispering. And if he left the pavilion with her in the midst of the first dance—it simply wouldn't do. And yet, he had heard the determination in Pat's voice. He knew she was quite capable of pretending to faint. What was Pat thinking? They had reached the door. "Pat," he began, "I simply can't—"

"Hello Pat," Jack's cheerful voice greeted her.

He had come in while they were dancing, and arrested by the sight of their faces, feeling sure they would make a break, hoped to distract attention from their exit by going out with them, if possible.

To his surprise Patricia returned his greeting with enthusiasm. "Hello, Jack. I've been looking for you. Come on take me out in the air. It's beastly hot in here. Thanks Jimmie. Jack will take me out."

Warren relinquished her with mingled relief and rage. She gave him a look of anger and triumph as if to say: "Well, there are other men who are glad to take me out."

Warren made his way back to their table to wait for Pam who was still dancing. From beneath lowered lids her somnolent eyes had taken in the scene at the pavilion door and she breathed a prayer of gratitude for the watchful tenderness of Jack Lawrence. He was always on hand at the right moment.

"What am I to do," she thought. The horrible pounding within her bosom that gave her no rest, and which she sometimes thought must soon wear her heart out by sheer overwork, was pushing at her breath, so that she talked with difficulty. She dreaded the impending scene when she must return to the waiting man at her table. She feared the watching eyes of the pavilion. How can he shame me so!

But years had taught her to smile while the heart broke, to talk of gay, inconsequential things, every nerve in her body pulling to the strain of it.

Angry blood darkened Arthur's pale face. "My God! Mrs. Warren, how can you talk like that. Even if you don't care for him, you're a woman. Don't you care at all? Why don't you stop it? Everybody's talking."

Oddly, she was not angry at him. Rather, it relieved the strain she'd been putting on herself. "What can I do?" she said in a low voice. "Pack Pat off to her father and set the whole colony laughing at me for getting jealous of a flapper? Besides I couldn't do it. Her father left her a amply provided with money. She has as much right here as I have."

"No, don't send her home," he said hastily. "Just tell them both where they get off. They know that in the end the whole thing is up to you. He can't divorce you just because he's lost his head over another woman. All you've got to do is to give him hell and tell both of 'em where they get off."

She laughed without mirth. "Pat's not used to being told where she gets off, as you put it. She'd simply tell me to go to the devil. And Jimmie can't be handled in that fashion."

"I wish to God we lived in the days when men kidnapped women and married them out of hand," he stormed.

That night Pamela wrote Mr. Braithwaite that she thought urgently he should come and get Pat. She didn't explain, but made it clear that he was needed at once.

On their way back to the hotel Jack suggested a picnic breakfast on the beach where they had first met. He bought a whole chicken, having the man unjoint it, fruit, rolls, a big thermos of coffee and hardboiled eggs. Hungry "as bears" by the time they reached their rendezvous, they proceeded at once to set the table on newspapers after they took off their shoes and waded into the ocean to wash their hands.

"I had a wire from Dadums last night," Patricia said when they sat on the sand to rest. "He's coming back—any day now. He has decided to come here for me instead of having me meet him in New York." That change of plan troubled her.

"Will you live in New York?" "I don't know. Dadums wants to take me to Paris to study art."

"You'll like that, won't you?" "I don't know. I did want to go terribly."

She looked into Jack's eyes, a hard steady light coming into her own, and said calmly, "This is the first time in my whole life that I ever dreaded to see my Dadums. He's the kindest, sweetest, dearest—" she broke off, her eyes holding him in unblinking regard.

"Then why—" he began.

She flung her arm over her face and dropped into the sand, weeping bitterly. He sat staring down at her a moment, then reached out and drew her up into his arms. She did not resist him, but rested her head on his breast, sobbing and sobbing.

He was not surprised by her break. He had seen how near she was to it for days. And his heart throbbed in painful joy that she had turned to him in her agony of confusion and despair.

He held her close, making no effort to soothe her, nor questioning. When she was ready she would have it all out. Now, tears were best. Just tears. Heavy, bitter, little-girl tears.

He steeled himself to meet what he knew was to be the hardest moment he could ever have.

After a time she began talking, as he had known she would. Talking. Talking. Punctuating her speech with long dry sobs like a child that has cried itself to sleep.

"My Dadums taught me never to look for ugly things that might fasten themselves onto me if I even so much as looked at them. At school I never talked with the other girls about—nasty things—I always got out. I wouldn't read nasty books like—some of them did—I didn't want nasty things to fasten onto me—"

"Then Aunt Pam told me all about what a nasty world it is. People getting married and not loving each other any more. Even her and Jimmie. And I'd always thought they were both so beautiful. And about girls marrying nasty old men for money. And it was the only way nice girls could get money if they were poor—and everybody thought it was a nice way to get money. She told me Dadums had kept things from me. Made me think he'd deceived me about everything and had brought me to Palm Beach to get money for us that way. Oh, I was just all to pieces, and I've been all to pieces ever since. She didn't mean it, I know. She meant to help me. But, think of being married to that old vermin of a man. Old and ugly and beastly. She told me to take him—to keep my Dadums from starving. You see why I fell in love with Jimmie, don't you?" she began weeping anew.

"Yes, dear, I see all too clearly." His throat was so dry that the words rasped harshly.

"I know Aunt Pam doesn't care. She as good as told me she was so bored with him she half wanted to die. It isn't her that worries me. It's Dadums. He's so—well, you know what I told you about our plantation—and how Aunt Pam's father got a man who would have paid fabulous money for it—and what he did—"

"Don't think I tell everybody about that," she went on. "I don't. But you didn't get to meet him and—I'm so proud of him. So vain of him. I wanted you to know what kind of a father I have. And it seems to me that one thing tells everything about him."

"It does."

"I could tell you a thousand things. All through our lives."

"That one is enough."

"Well—I'm—so afraid he'll be upset about—about my loving Jimmie. Oh, I do love him. Jack I love him so much that it's eating me up in here. She drew herself out of his arms and beat her breast with a small clenched fist. "I didn't want to love him. Or any other man. But—" She stopped, her throat working, and with a stony face finished, "but my Dadums."

It seemed to Jack that every drop of his blood was pounding against the walls of his skull. The sea went red. The muscles of his arms ached. He had known all along, of course, but to have her put it into words—to witness her suffering as he felt, more than man should be called on to endure. This years of slavery, monotony, filth, starvation with every bone and muscle crying out in agony, the loss even of hope as time went on, had been a child's troubles as compared with this.

There must be a way, though, he reflected grimly. If I could get him in a card game, and let him catch me cheating—he would blurt it out—it would form an obvious reason for my killing him.

Neglect of Goiter May Lead to an Operation

Prompt and Proper Care May Bring About a Cure, But Delay and Self-Treatment Are Dangerous

By DR. ROYAL S. COPELAND

United States Senator from New York. Former Commissioner of Health, New York City.

WITHIN THE past decade tremendous strides have been made in the study of goiter. At one time goiter was regarded as a fatal ailment and little was known concerning a cure; then came discovery of the cause of the ailment, iodine in the drinking water, as a means of combating goiter.

Although great benefit has been derived from this simple remedy, harm has been done by unwise and unscientific self-medication. Not every goiter is caused by a deficiency of iodine in the body, and in that case the drug may work damage. These cases require careful and continued medical attention.

Where Water Lacks Iodine

Goiter is a common disorder in Switzerland, where all the water lacks iodine. In this country it is met in the Great Lakes region, where there is little iodine. This deficiency has been overcome by adding a certain amount of iodine to the water reservoirs in districts where goiter is prevalent, and this is done under the supervision of health authorities.

Goiter is really an enlargement of the thyroid gland of the neck. It may be traced to other conditions than lack of iodine. For example, an inflammation of the thyroid may cause increase in its tissues.

This form of goiter differs from that caused by lack of iodine. It is met in childhood, but is most common in persons beyond forty years of age. The treatment varies, depending upon the cause. Operation may be necessary, but this need not cause undue alarm, for when performed by a competent surgeon it is a simple and successful procedure.

Never Treat Yourself

Any enlargement of the thyroid gland should have immediate examination by a physician. He will determine definitely whether the enlargement is caused by lack of iodine, by over-secretion of the thyroid gland, by tumor or other abnormality; then he will prescribe the necessary medication. Never treat yourself for this disturbance, as you are likely to do more harm than good.

Many a person aware that he has goiter neglects it for fear of the knife. This is unwise, because most cases of goiter readily respond to proper and careful medication.

Be in mind that a neglected goiter becomes more and more difficult to cure. Often operation, that could have been avoided by early and proper medical attention is made necessary by reason of neglect.

was observed and tips were heard over the radio from station WLW. We then listened for a few minutes to Walter Damrosch's musical broadcast from the same station, and just as the children started to march back to their rooms, a beautiful march was heard on the radio. Children of today can hardly realize that our country was in a great war only a few years ago. And though we long for world peace we can not afford to neglect our brave soldiers both living and dead who fought to protect our liberty and make our country safe.

The State Department of Education puts on a testing program each year known as the "Primary Pupil Test." We expect to take part in this program this year. Tests have been ordered and every pupil above the second grade will be given one or more standard tests. The week of Dec. 7th, 1932, is the time we expect to make a good showing on the tests.

His presence in this section of the country recalls his spectacular rise from a dry goods clerk at $2.27 a month to one of America's leading merchants.

Mr. Penney was born at Hamilton, Mo., September 16, 1875, the son of a Baptist minister of the old school. He became accustomed to hard work from early boyhood. At seventeen he got his first job as a clerk. After a losing venture as butcher shop proprietor in Longmont, Colo., he opened the first Penney store in Kemmerer, Wyo., on an investment of $500.00. Operating on a plan under which all store managers have had an opportunity to share substantially in the profits of their individual stores, the organization has steadily expended until today it operates 1477 stores located in every state in the Union with an annual sales volume of $175,000,000.00.

Early in his career Mr. Penney acquired a deep insight into the service that modern business can render in advancing public welfare. In his recent autobiography he says:

"Money and the making of money are not ends in themselves, but means to a social end. Money ceases to be an individual possession and becomes a public trust."

"A merchant who loses sight of this relationship between himself and his customers and sees money as first and last, instead of seeing it as a by-product of performing an essential service, is not likely to last long."

"Ours is a business civilization, and I am strongly persuaded that it is an obligation of business leadership to share with youth and with the educators and counselors of youth the results of business experience."

"Even in times of business depression, wealth is more widely diffused today than it was in earlier generations."
